CALIFORNIA

Coronavirus cases rise, but Newsom defends reopening

"We have to recognize you can't be in a permanent state where people are locked away — for months and months and months and months on end — to see lives and livelihoods completely destroyed, without considering the health impact of those decisions as well." - Gov. Gavin Newsom

Order takeout? Proposed California law aims for truth in all online restaurant menus

"The State Assembly didn't just pass this bill – they moved it forward with an overwhelming "yes" vote of 60-5. Could it be that most reasonable people recognize that a tech company should have permission from a local restaurant before listing its menu, brand, and service on a delivery app? We think so. And, today, California's State Assembly sided with small, independent business owners."

– Jot Condie, President & CEO, California Restaurant Association

News You Need to Know: Bill regulating delivery platforms' use of restaurants brands moves forward

Good news! The State Assembly has overwhelmingly passed AB 2149, the bill that would require third-party delivery platforms to get your permission before they can list your restaurant on their platform. Now, we will urge the State Senate to act on this bill. Also, Sabrina tells us that there are important updates to the state's reopening guidelines. We encourage you to read through them thoroughly: in addition to allowing the reopening of bars, wineries, and bar areas within restaurants, there are changes to the original guidelines that were issued for restaurants last month. Access the updated guidelines here.
